Innovations in Cruising

It's not just bigger ships and unique dining options that sets some cruises above others, these days you can experience an excursion by submarine or cantilevered platforms that ride up and down the outside of the ship for al fresco dining.

The cruise industry is continuing to grow globally at a great rate of knots (see what we did there?) and innovation is what is keeping it on the top of bucket lists everywhere. With the huge raft of onboard options (ok, we will stop now) passengers are returning time and again as they seek out new destinations as well as new innovations.

► Crystal Cruises

Let's start with Crystal Cruises and their $2 million submarine that can take a pilot and two guests at a time and dive down as deep as 300 metres. It looks like a big plastic bubble with skis on the sides and is usually reserved for researchers and film makers.

The C Explorer 3 has a 360-degree Plexiglas hull and travels at about three knots. A 20-30 minute voyage is offered on Crystal's Esprit in the Seychelles to allow guests to "dive" the reefs at a cost of about US$599 per person. It will be offered on other itineraries, including in the Adriatic soon. Cameras and cellphones are allowed onboard and you go through a full briefing on the ship before your excursion. This is ideal for those who don't like the idea of SCUBA diving or even snorkelling but would love to see the incredible fish and delicate coral that lies beneath.

► Dream Cruises

The Palace is a new concept onboard Genting Dream and World Dream and it's like a ship within the ship. It's an enclave of luxurious cabins – part boutique hotel, part clubhouse, which is the perfect solution for multigenerational travellers when grandma and grandad want to travel in style, but the kids and grandkids don't care about crisp white linens and personalised butler service. Palace guests can go anywhere on the ship, but if they want the small ship style of cruising with their own private sun deck, private gym and spa or just spend time in the whiskey and cigar lounge, they have that small ship feel. If you really want luxury, book a Palace Villa with a private whirlpool spa and sauna on your own deck and host private dinners in your room.

► Majestic Princess®

If you're unafraid of heights the Sea Walk onboard Majestic Princess® is a snazzy little bridge that loops out from the side of the ship and has a glass bottom so you can see the ocean washing away under your feet. It's less than 20 metres long and cantilevers out at nearly 40 metres above sea level, extending 8.5 metres out from the ship – like the view the captain has when he's pulling into port. And on the other side the Sea View Bar incorporates the glass bottom walkway into a bar with floor to ceiling windows as you sip your cocktail high above the ocean.

► Celebrity Cruises®

On Celebrity Edge® you can step onto the Magic Carpet, a cantilevered bar/dining space that can take up to 100 guests. It lifts up to the top of the ship and goes all the way down to Deck 2. It's not a ride, but a bar and dining space with live music when it's positioned sky high above the 14th deck. On Deck 5 it becomes an extension of the pool area providing an open air dining experience over the sea. Then down at Deck 2 it is used as part of the gateway for the tender boats taking passengers to shore.

► Royal Caribbean

The Skydiving booths and surf rider waves on Royal Caribbean's Quantum class ships almost pale into insignificance when it comes to this high-tech innovation. For a whole lot of wow, head to the Bionic Bar onboard several of Royal Caribbean's mega ships. You place your cocktail order via tablet and the robotic arm will begin a strange dance lifting a shaker under the appropriate 150 upturned bottles of spirits hanging over the bar and then diving to the back for mixers, ice and even lemons, then it muddles or shakes and finally it positions itself at your cup, pours and sends it down a teeny lane carved into the bar where you release it with your electronic ID card into your waiting hands. The whole process takes about one minute. It's ideal for the Instagram crowd, with smart phones recording more hours of this than probably any other thing on the cruise.

► Norwegian Cruise Line

NCL offers the coolest bar at sea with the introduction of the Svedka Vodka Ice Bar at a chilly -8° C on Norwegian Breakaway and Norwegian Epic. For US$20 you'll get a warm coat and gloves to spend 45 minutes sipping vodka out of glasses made entirely of ice and standing amongst ice sculptures before emerging to warm up in one of the many other bars onboard.

On Norwegian Bliss petrol heads will rejoice at the longest race track at sea on the top deck where you can drive go karts around hair pin bends against the back drop of Alaska's snowy mountains or the Caribbean's pristine beaches. Or whiz down the water slide tunnel that takes you over the ocean far below, or play laser tag on sea days to keep the whole family entertained!

ROYAL

THIS IS WHERE ADVENTURE BEGINS

You're on the ocean, but this is not a cruise. It's an adventure that takes you from skydiving and surfing on the deck of the world's most incredible ships to exploring island after island and culture after culture. From the moment you step onboard a Royal Caribbean® cruise you will discover world-class dining, first at-sea activities like ice-skating and simulated skydiving*, awe-inspiring entertainment and outstanding service. From rock walls on every ship to elegant dining rooms and relaxing spas, the experience is nothing short of incredible. The rooms on a Royal Caribbean® ship are like a top-notch hotel. Surprising Dining at Sea

On the newest, biggest mega ships you will find up to 25 different restaurants serving distinctive and delectable fare, Italian or Japanese, seafood, steak houses or even Michelin Star celebrity chefs creating their own menus at sea. That's more restaurants than you'd find on the island of Denarau!

To make sure you get to dine in your restaurant of choice, make sure you book in as soon as you board the ship – or even better, pre book from home. Some will charge a small extra cost, but you may love it so much you'll be booking in again before your cruise is over.

On Seabourn, for example, you can join the chef as he shops in local markets, haggling for the best price on the freshest food and handing over wads of folding. It's an eye-opening experience to watch the commerce side of cruise ship day in a port and you'll hear multiple languages as vendors discuss the deal and the chef speaks whatever language he needs to in each port. Then that evening you'll know where you want to be to try today's purchases.

Celebrity chefs have branched from TV screens into the deep blue and several have opened restaurants on ships. Some cruise lines use the chefs to consult on menus, others train the ship chefs to create dishes they have designed specially to be enjoyed at sea. The Thomas Keller Grill onboard Seabourn is the latter. The Grill is an extension of the three Michelin star chef's highly acclaimed restaurants French Laundry, Bouchon and Per Se, and not only does he train the chefs, he also requires photographs of the plates from sea. You'd be wise to make your reservation from home before you even embark.

On Celebrity ships look out for Qsine which offers quirky twists on small plate dining. Your menu is on an iPad featuring things like sushi on lollipop sticks and popcorn fish n chips.

On Royal Caribbean's Allure of the Seas® and Oasis of the Seas®, get to 150 Central Park for "farm to ship" seasonal and sustainable six course menus by Miami chef Michael Schwartz. These ships are often home ported in Fort Lauderdale and the fresh ingredients are sourced from small South Florida farms.

On Silversea's Silver Spirit, Silver Cloud, Silver Spirit, Silver Shadow and Silver Whisper book into Le Champagne. This is boutique lodge Relais & Chateau's only ocean offering and you'll enjoy an intimate dining experience among the wine racks feasting on locally sourced ingredients.

If you're a sushi fan and have always wanted to visit chef Nobu Matsuhisa's exclusive restaurants around the world, you might like to choose Crystal Serenity or Crystal Symphony ships and book into Silk Road or the Sushi Bar, Umi Uma. Not only will you be wowed by the presentation of the sushi, but the dessert bento box is a mouth watering blend of East-meets-West sweet treats.

On the small, boutique Windstar Cruises try Candles; a steakhouse on the deck lit by candles under the stars.

Or if you're cruising with Holland America Line, Tamarind is an outstanding Asian Fusion restaurant showcasing the best of Southeast Asia, China and Japan.

But it's not all fine dining and white table cloths, some ships have snack offerings which will do more than just tide you over. Try the Boardwalk Dog House on Royal Caribbean's Allure of the Seas® serving, you guessed it, grilled hot dogs. Seven types in fact, from German bratwurst to the Coney Island dog.

On MSC Cruises you'll find the best gelato at sea served up pool side and providing unlimited temptation every afternoon.

And there are even some exciting things happening to traditional buffet dining these days.

P&O Cruises are saying bye bye buffet and hello food revolution as they strip out the traditional onboard buffet dining deck and replace it with what they call The Pantry. It really is like nothing you've seen on cruise ships before when it comes to the all-inclusive buffet dining options. The Pantry is more like a food court with chefs at different stations specialising in fare like fish n chips and salad bars to Mexican and Mediterranean, plus an entire Vegetarian kitchen, a Noodle bar and of course, a dessert station.

There is also a main dining room on every ship where you might have your designated table, with or without the same guests each night. But fortunately the days of having to opt in to your dining hour are few and far between with dine on your time options far more common.

But it's the specialty restaurants and intimate dining that is one of the most popular things about the onboard experience. So all in all, foodies are spoiled for choice when it comes to choosing a ship by its cuisine offerings, but to confuse you even further, a fun thing to do on smaller ships is to dine with the locals.

Small cruise ships can get into smaller ports and offer very different itineraries (not to mention fewer onboard activities) than their mega ship sisters. Often they stay overnight in port, which means you can enjoy the dining scene on shore. Pop into a little taverna and eat with the locals, or sit and people watch over a cheeky glass of wine and drink in the mystery and magnificence of your amazing holiday, breathing out: "this is the life".

Onboard restaurant images shown are of Blu and Qsine restaurants which are found onboard select Celebrity Cruises® ships.

Unique Experiences Ashore

Imagine squealing with delight on the back of a sled pulled by excited husky dogs in Alaska, or squealing with mild panic as slippery stingrays brush around your legs hoping for the squid you are holding in your hands in the Cayman Islands. These kinds of experiences are just a taste of what's on offer on cruises and ensure your dinner party guests are enthralled for years to come.

Shore excursions offer everything from adrenalin rushes to sitting in the ancient ruins of the breathtaking library in Ephesus for dinner or a bespoke pilgrimage to the WWII resting place of family members.

But sometimes just pottering about in a new town, having lunch at an outdoor restaurant and people watching is a perfect day too. And that's the beauty of cruising: doing as much or as little as you wish.

Here's a tip though, some of these unique excursions fill up quickly so once you're booked, or even at the time of booking your cruise, it's a good idea to book in for some of these side trips before you travel so you don't miss out.

Here are some of the more unique shore excursions that might help you decide which cruise to book...

▶ Alaska

The aforementioned husky sledding is an amazing experience for the whole family as you meet the pack of excited dogs eager to run like the wind towing you along behind them. But another really special activity is a float plane that takes off from the sea and flies over the magnificent waters of coastal Alaska to a river where, right beside a salmon hatchery, you can stand, camera stuck to your face, and watch as black bears meander out from the woods into the river about 30 metres away to catch their dinner. And to top it off, look up and you'll see American bald eagles circling overhead ready to pick up any leftovers.

▶ Cook my Catch

For the fisherman (or woman) in your life, Princess Cruises® offers an excursion in Alaska where you can head out on a salmon or halibut fishing excursion by day and bring your catch back to the chef to cook it the way you'd like it for dinner that night. You'll find this unique experience on itineraries in Juneau and Ketchikan.

▶ Barcelona

An evening tapas walking tour in Barcelona is an excellent way to see the city and at the same time be guided around the best tastes it has to offer. You'll walk up Las Ramblas and drink in the sights of Gaudi's architecture melding with regular buildings and enjoy the whole melee. You'll visit the food market and see shops decorated with dozens of parma ham legs hanging from ceilings, then finish in the Gothic Quarter at one of the best restaurants in the city. But, while Sagrada Familia is touristy, if you haven't been INSIDE this incredible cathedral, this is a must-do. The tapas can come after.

▶ Dine locally around the world

Cruise with Azamara Club Cruises and you'll get to really immerse yourself into the daily life of locals at each port with their Cruise Global Taste Local programme. Foodies will love having the freedom to dine locally at the best authentic restaurants on shore. You might like to add a private guided tour, a car rental or just potter off on your own with some ideas from the crew for their best recommendations if you wish.

▶ Cayman Islands

On a sand bar out in the sea at Grand Cayman is what is known as Stingray City. It's where dozens of friendly Southern Atlantic Stingrays come and hang out in about a metre of water and where loads of small boats come and anchor for an hour or so to swim, snorkel and hop about among them. People bring squid to feed them and they suck it out of your hand from their mouths which are underneath their bodies. The females can be up to a metre wide and they feel like a wet mushroom slithering against your legs. Bring an underwater camera for this excursion as the water is crystal clear and you'll get some amazing shots here.

▶ Dine amongst the ruins in Ephesus

Take an Ancient Wonders of Greece and Ephesus cruise with Windstar Cruises and when you get to Kusadasi (the port for Ephesus) you can enjoy a complimentary breathtaking dinner in front of the Library of Celsus. Dating back to about 117AD you'll walk down the Marble Road to the magnificent building built to store 12,000 scrolls which will be lit up under the night sky so you can clearly see the detailed sculptures and niches on the facade. You'll pinch yourself as you sit at tables under the stars and enjoy a five-course white-gloved dinner accompanied by a trio from the Aegean Chamber Orchestra.

▶ Kayaking in Antarctica

The small ships that sail into the pristine Antarctic offer a swathe of unique expeditions that include kayaking and even a polar plunge for the truly brave who strip off to their bathing suits and hurl themselves into the icy drink, before towelling off, redressing all the layers and speeding back to the ship on a Zodiac for a nice hot shower.

▶ Italy - war cemetery visits

A popular and very moving excursion is to visit the final resting place of your grandfather, uncles and loved ones who fought and died in Europe during WWI and WWII. Rome (Civitavecchia) is one of the closest ports to the Battle of Cassino which took place for 123 days in 1944 between with four main attacks. Here you'll find thousands of graves with headstones or crosses and you can visit the battle field where it all took place then find your relative's grave to pay your respects.

If you know where to find your relative, that's all that is required for a personalised tour with a guide who will meet you at the ship and can take you to several cemeteries including Barcelona, Rome, Florence, Venice, Naples, Sicily and more.

▶ Look out for overnight port stays

Cruises that offer late departures or overnight stays in port open up a whole new world of options for local dining and night life to really ensure an authentic and less touristy experience.

River Cruise Revolution

River cruising in Europe as we know it today has only been possible since 1992 when the Main-Danube Canal opened after 30 years of construction, joining together these massive rivers and linking the waterways of Europe into a mighty playground for us to explore from the water.

The canal itself is 172km long but it creates a 3,500km network of arteries running through 15 countries, under 123 bridges and through 16 locks – designed to save water – with many also creating hydro-power. This canal is one of the largest engineering projects ever undertaken in the world and river cruising is one of the fastest growing sectors in the travel industry.

Once you've done a river cruise it's hard to return to ocean cruising, they say! Why? Calm water, smaller ships and therefore fewer passengers with more exclusive service, easy to get ashore, no taxis or customs or airports and train stations, and something to see all day every day whether from your cabin or on land.

It's the convenience of not having to meticulously organise your own itinerary that appeals when it comes to cruising. Any cruising really, but particularly European river cruising as it's such an easy way to get around with all the admin taken care of for you.

► So how do you choose which itinerary and which ship to take?

Look at the cities you'll visit and know that many ships offer their shore excursions as part of the price so each day you can either tootle off with the group and a guide or go exploring on your own. Some days you'll do both. This is perfect for first timers who are not sure of the highlights in each town and don't want to miss anything.

You might also like the personalised experience of joining the chefs early in the morning when they set out to the local market to buy fresh ingredients for that night and where you can watch them get amongst the sampling and haggling and cajoling as they settle on the finest fare at the best price – and you know what you'll be ordering later.

Themed cruises also create a unique experience like a music cruise that takes you to various concert halls and opera houses, then continues with the same musical atmosphere back onboard, or a Christmas cruise to some of Germany's most iconic Christmas markets for mulled wine, toasted chestnuts and carolling.

As well as the magnificence of the scenery passing by your window, the food on board river cruises is one of the most memorable aspects with attention given to fresh ingredients, often bought daily, and first class service from your attentive crew, so if you're a foodie you might put that high on your priority list.

► What will we do on a river cruise?

No two days are the same on a river cruise. Unlike ocean cruising where sometimes many days are spent at sea and therefore onboard activities making up a huge part of what ships offer their guests, you will be in a new town or village every day.

Some ships have bicycles onboard for guests to take and head off exploring on their own – even to the next port, others offer educational presentations where you can learn all about the history of the place you will be in next, from the Czars of Russia to the artists of France.

► What other rivers are popular?

While the rivers of Europe with their limitless choices of things to do and see are the most popular cruises for Kiwis, the rest of the world has some gems that are well worth discovering.

► Cruise the Nile

Cruises on the Nile tend to be about four days and you can choose from a traditional steam ship (the inspiration for Agatha Christie's Death on the Nile), a modern vessel with air conditioned cabins and a pool onboard to cool off after a hot day exploring the ancient sites, or even a felucca, which is a traditional wind powered sail boat where you'll sleep on deck in a sleeping bag. The latter is ideal for the budget traveller!

Egypt cruises tend to start or end in Luxor and if you love ancient history then choose one that also includes an Egyptologist onboard explaining the sites you'll visit each day. Many of Egypt's famous sites are located along the river, so while it's easier to get around in Egypt on land than it was years ago, a cruise on the Nile is still very popular for that reason. At night you'll be blown away by the monuments and temples that are breathtakingly lit up. By day you'll cruise gently through countryside that remains largely as it was thousands of years ago.

You will spend more time on the water than on European rivers, but with no busy roads to navigate or hawkers to fend off, just enjoy unpacking once and seeing Egypt literally roll along in front of you.

► The mighty Mississippi

You may not know that writer Mark Twain, who wrote about this river, was once a river boat pilot on the Mississippi and to pass his pilot's exam he had to draw the entire 3,700km river from memory all the way from Lake Itasca in Minnesota to the Gulf of Mexico.

Today the American Queen paddle wheel steam boat, the largest ever built, takes passengers along this iconic river offering many themed cruises including Civil War history and plantation homes, Christmas markets with the sounds, scents and flavours of a winter Christmas, or a Big Band cruise with a 13-piece orchestra onboard, to name just a few. There are free lectures plus the shore excursions, beer and wine is all included.

You'll enjoy the charm of this busy working river relaxing in your opulent Victorian era cabin opening with French doors onto the deck, stopping at cities and small towns with tales to tell.

Each day when you set off one of the crew plays the steam pipe calliope as the mighty red paddle wheel heaves into action and the next adventure unfolds.
